Institute referendum

Dear Editor:

As a former resident, cultural commissioner and councilman of Carmel, I have been much interested in the proposals for the Post Office in Carmel. There appears to be much misinformation regarding the pressures which have been brought to build a new large post office at Sunset.

The views of the citizens of Carmel who are vitally interested seem to have been overlooked or cast aside.

Wouldn't this be a good time for some of the concerned citizens of Carmel to institute a referendum so that the citizens of Carmel can express their wishes on this matter which so vitally concerns them?

Coastal Commission

Dear Editor:

I am sure that many people in the Carmel area who appreciate the beauty of our coast will thank Mayor Bernard Anderson for his forthright statement in his Pine Cone column of Feb. 20 regarding the Coastal Zone Conservation Act and the establishment of its Regional Commissions.

Here is the wise, long-range view of a local official in tune with majority public opinion. Note particularly this three-sentence excerpt from Mayor Anderson's statement:

"The three or four years needed to develop a wise plan for not only our protection but for those yet to come, as delineated in Proposition 20, will be recognized as the years go by as one of the wisest measures taken by our state legislature. And isn't it about time that we recognize that the preservation of our coastline cannot be entrusted to the pressures and whims of every local government fronting the Pacific Ocean? There are areas where regional government is an absolute necessity, and this is one."

An honest person?

Dear Editor:

It is said that the ancient Greek Diogenes went about with a lantern looking for an honest person. What would be the result, if something similar occurred in our modern world?

Say, there were a number of highly ethical human beings around in today's world of our incessantly orbiting Earth. Say, they decided to visit every land and look diligently for highly civilized virtues that are the promise of a noble tomorrow - if there is to be a tomorrow for humanity.

Their flashing lanterns - or flashlights! - will shine in each person's face as they scan for such attributes as rationality, kindness, fairness and realism. Integrity to a very high degree. Wisdom to avoid dissipation and preserve good health. A frowning on criminal degradation instead of shrugging the shoulders or dreaming up excuses for it. Shunning cynical greed. Control of one's aggressive instincts and dedication to peace, unless attacked. Sincere concern for the good of mankind. The inspiration of a better world of security, prosperity, high ideals, good health and friendliness, on some tomorrow.

Alas! How many could these searchers, for noble qualities, find who will be worthy to put on their lists? Look about. In all circles of society - from those possessing great power and wealth down to the ranks of the many of humbler attainments. Whether college graduates or of meager education.

Yes, it's true! Somehow, mankind has not in the past nor in the present produced a crop sufficiently large of what it takes to build a far, far lovelier, and worthwhile, and happier world. Has man's long, tiresome and meandering climb from jungle trials, fears and hates, yet made him a sufficiently civilized personality? What does the news, daily, indicate? What do we witness as we go about our every-day lives?

Outlaw war

Dear Editor:

This universal conscience of man has become more and more abhorrent to the concept of fighting wars. Our present generations resistance to the Vietnamese conflict, was evidence of the growing dissent to wars, particularly those not threatening the sovereignty or freedom of the aggressor. It can be argued that assistance to an ally attacked or threatened, can be supported only under grave general circumstances such as World War I and World War II that threatened the peace at large.

Man has been murdering, brutalizing, and plundering friend and foe alike ever since his coexistence began. But now, with atomic doomsday looming-up, his exploits of free wheeling sanguinary mauling must end.

By the Twenty First Century, man's technology will have opened the door to mass production of human needs and the transportation capacity to supply them to all nations on earth. Where in earlier centuries they were purloined by force of arms.

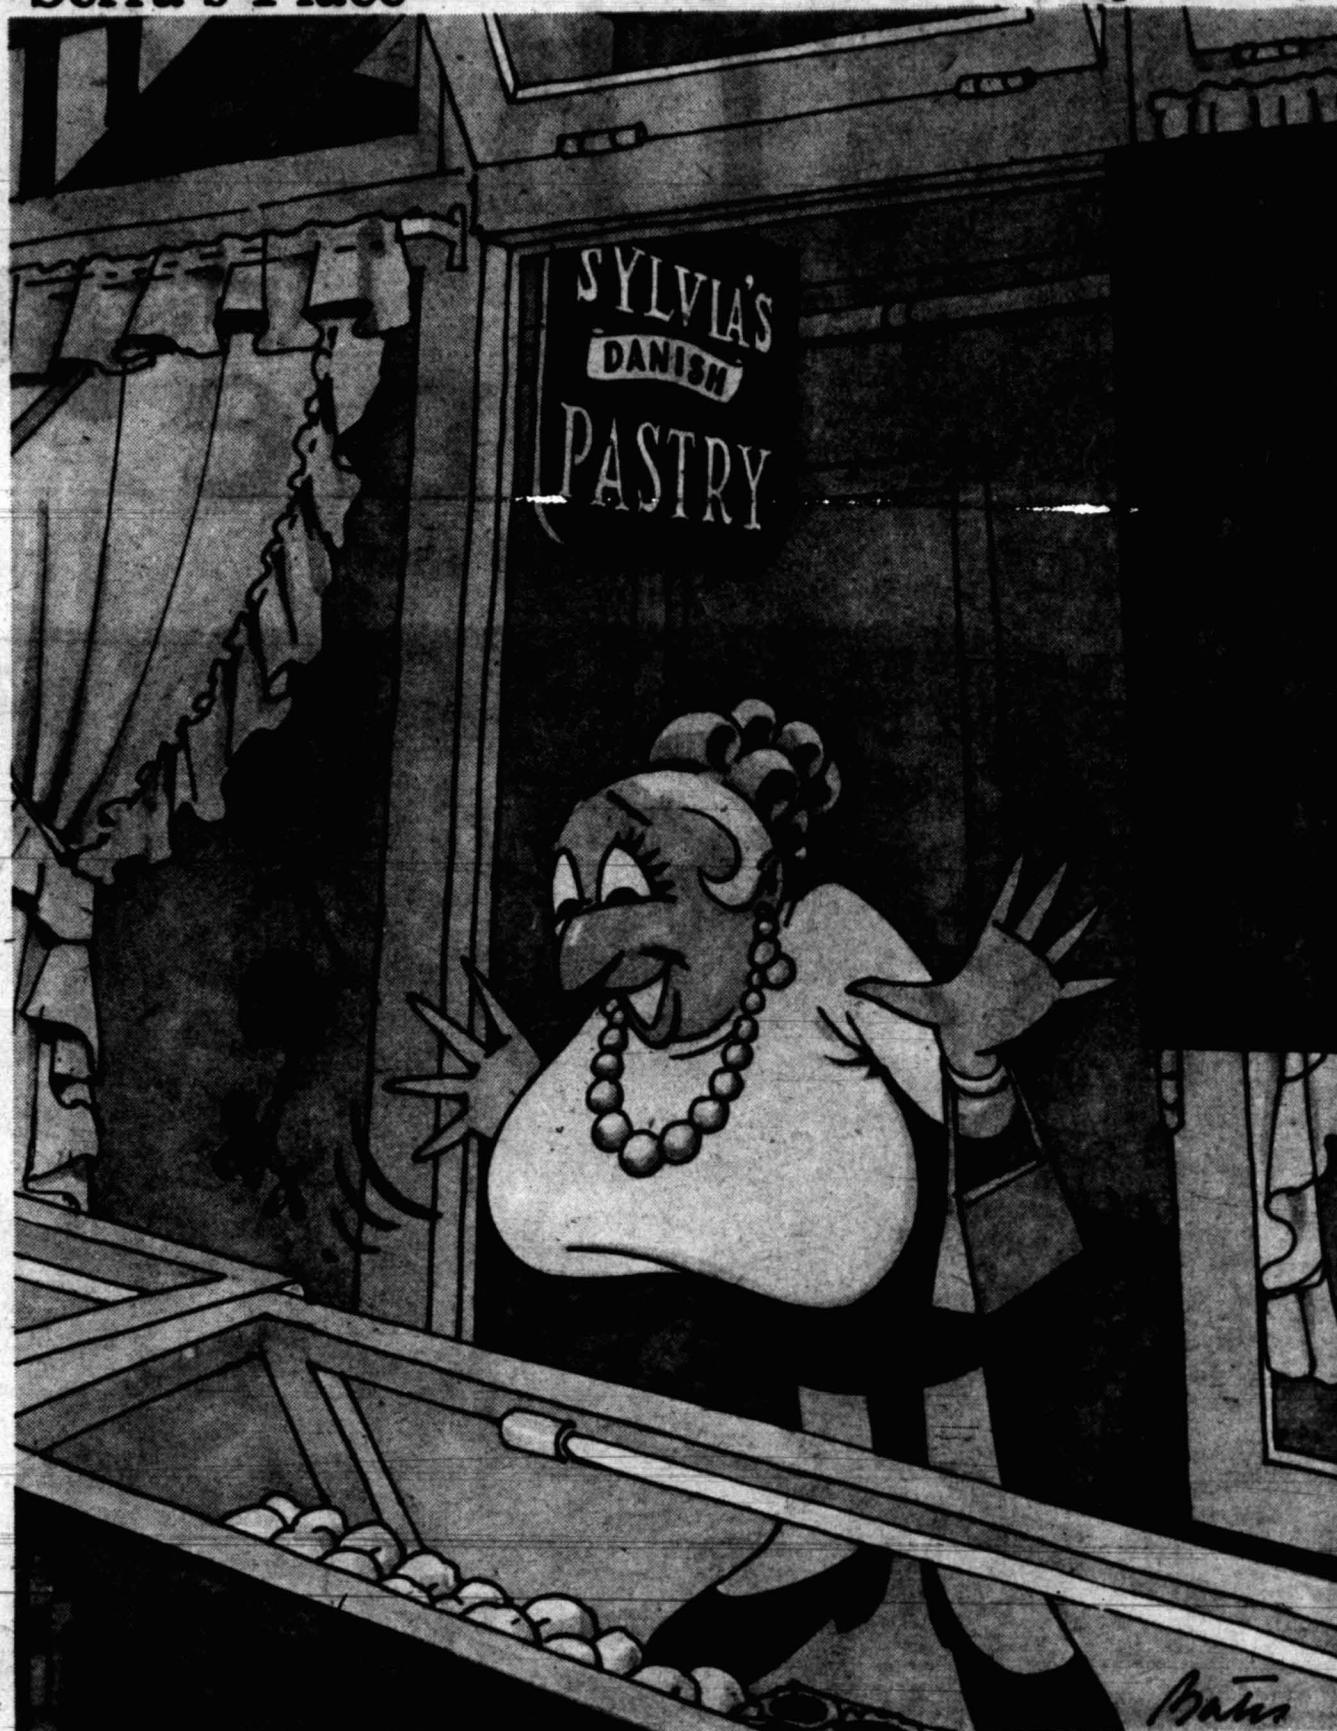

Human society will outlaw territorial aggression and acts of inhumanity, so deplored by righteous men of this century.

Astrologers have predicted a momentous conjunction of all the planets in the solar system. It will occur in the year 1998, the first time since the three wise men followed the Star of Bethlehem. This conjunction could well be another momentous occurrence in destiny's blueprint for human kind.

"POPOVERS!"

Contemplating freedom

Dear Editor:

What about our Republic today? David Starr Jordan, first President of Stanford University, in replying to the question: "How will it (America) endure?" replied: "So long as the ideas of its Founding Fathers remain dominant."

Dominant with the Fathers at the time was the culmination of some two thousand years of savant consideration of abstract philosophy of the new and vague factor, freedom. Freedom as stemming from release, from all-pervading polytheistic bondage by the Hebrew Chieftan, Abraham, in 1897 B.C. followed by a host of expositors, including Moses' freedom by code; Christ's freedom by truth; Wyeth's freedom from the priesthood; etc., etc., and on to John Locke's (1632-1704) assertion that Man was endowed by God with the essential elements of freedom.

Thos. Jefferson's expropriation of Locke's theme (All men...endowed by their Creator) to use as the primary objective of the new social order dimly envisioned for future America raised freedom to the status of a social force, ninety years later referred to by Lincoln as "A new birth of freedom" and as a new social force, probably the world's greatest challenge toward effecting a new workable order. An order providing for equitable production reward, machinery for the efficient exchanges of goods and services, a political machine that would non-coercively keep a balance between the conflicting interests, rights and privileges of its citizenry. Except that such could be accomplished, no structure of freedom could persist, or get started. Mankind would not tolerate it.

Such was the monumental task that an acknowledged gracious Providence had set before one, George Washington, who happily had been blessed with a passionate love of freedom for mankind and an undying determination for its political somnance in a social order of the future. Thus it should be clear that, had there been no George Washington, there would have been no USA in which we live and without his passion for freedom there would have been no George Washington. By the same token it follows that there can be no decent American whose heart is not filled with gratitude and reverence for the memory of the man whose life-long devotion and service to Country set a pattern never surpassed and an example that no one could better honour himself than to follow.

But, latterly, David Starr Jordan's formula for the demise of our Country has come to pass. We are being conditioned to disdain the "dominance" of our Founding Father ideas and examples. To cap the climax as it were, we have only to consider antics of an impious, supine and uncourageous group of men, morally incapable of comprehending the grandeur of their country's founding ideas or the heroes that brought them into being. These American misfits have wished upon us a substitute for honor and glory - a three-day week-end designed to divert the mind to hedonistic delights quite to the exclusion of that gratitude and reverence for Country, without which it must surely die.

It is not high time that some patriotic organizations such as the Legion and the DAR came to our rescue and brought our Congress into line in this crucial matter? crucial matter?

Board votes to reconstruct Bay School

By Tom Lueck

Tears of joy were shed in the Middle School Library last Wednesday night as the school board cast a unanimous vote to accept bids on reconstruction of the Bay School. The board action was backed by one of the most determined and emotionally charged fund raising campaigns in the history of the district.

Last week's affirmative vote means that the 100-year-old "little red schoolhouse", sitting at the north end of San Jose Creek State Beach, will be demolished and completely rebuilt to bring it up to state imposed earthquake safety standards. While the project may not be completed before the opening date for classes next fall, it promises the nursery school program operating in the old building continued use of its historical and scenic site.

Prior to last week's meeting the prospect of Bay School reconstruction seemed dim. A majority of the board had indicated in public discussion that they would not support supplementing district funds already raised for the project. A permissive override tax measure called by the board and $9,500 raised through the efforts of Bay School supporters brought a total of $74,000 into the district's account for the project — substantially short of the $86,000 estimated figure for architectural and contractual labor.

The $12,000 gap was filled in the five days preceding last week's meeting through a massive fund raising campaign by Bay School parents and alumni. With solicitors stationed in the Carmel post office, and hundreds of district residents being telephoned for contributions, $12,135 was raised.

Nancy Wirtz, who coordinated the last minute fund raising efforts, said this week most of the money was pledged in the form of $10 to $15 donations.

"I have had the privilege of being part of a miracle," Mrs. Wirtz told the board last Wednesday, her voice braced against an onrush of emotion. "The people of this community have put their hearts where their mouths have been."

Not only had the Bay School support group received pledges for cash donations, but had guaranteed those donations with deposits in a bank account. A Pacific Grove attorney attended the meeting prepared to write out a check.

Prior to their unanimous vote to accept the check and give final approval to the Bay School project, members of the board voiced admiration for the efforts of the Bay School support group.

Newly re-elected board member Pamela Smith, who stated three weeks ago that she would not support appropriation of "one more penny" of taxpayers monies for the project, told the large crowd assembled at the meeting, "I have never seen such support from a small group before. We've got to preserve this spirit ... it's something the district needs desperately."

Board member Dick Wilsdon, who was also elected to serve another term on the board at the polls two weeks ago, said he was "fantastically impressed" by the fund raising efforts of the support group. The only member of the board who expressed support for supplementing funds already generated for the project from district accounts, he said he had never seen such wide ranging support for a project since he moved to the district in 1961.

In approving the project, members of the board made no mention of a $5,000 contingency fund which had been recommended by the district business manager, Walter Hinton.

Wilsdon explained after the meeting that if costs on the project exceed the estimated $86,000, money will have to be appropriated out of district reserves.

Last week's meeting, like several earlier meetings dealing with proposals for Bay School reconstruction, was attended by over 100 parents, alumni, and district residents urging approval of the project.

Substantive doubts about the project were voiced by Monterey attorney Tom Hudson, who had proposed to the board an alternative plan which would have provided for preservation of the old schoolhouse in its present condition.

While Hudson's plan would not have allowed continued use of the building as a district classroom (state legislation has mandated the abandonment of the building for such use unless it is entirely rebuilt), he told the board that "what the community is most interested in is historical preservation, not bulldozing and rebuilding."

Stating that he and his family would provide the necessary funds for the project, the Pt. Lobos land owner advocated construction of severing the addition which was built in 1964 from the historical one room schoolhouse building. He proposed building an addition on to the newer part of the school, and expanding that facility by 900-square-feet.

The new structure could be used for classroom activities, and the old could be preserved as a landmark and used for non-classroom related community activities, he said.

While concurring with Wilsdon's view that "Mr. Hudson's intentions are certainly good ones," the board was informed that the old structure would be affected by earthquake codes even if it is not used as a classroom. Assistant Superintendent of Schools Walter Hinton explained that, under what was termed "the Hudson Plan," the state would require a large fence to be erected around the old structure and signs hung indicating that the building is unsafe.

The only decision which remains before the board regarding the Bay School project is when demolition and reconstruction should begin. Wilsdon explained it is unlikely that the work can be completed during the summer vacation. Thus, the nursery program may either have to recess early for summer vacation this year, or resume classes late next fall.

He said the decision will be made at a later board meeting.

Dormody house burns

The Carmel Fire Department has placed an estimate of $10,000 on the structural damages caused by a blaze in one of Carmel's older homes last Thursday.

A large part of the interior of the home of Dr. and Mrs. Horace Dormody, located on the southwest corner of Dolores and 12th, was destroyed.

While both Dr. Dormody and his wife were away from their home at the time of the fire, smoke was first noticed shortly before 4 p.m. Thursday by neighbor Joseph Tanous. After attempting to put the fire out with a garden hose, Tanous called the fire department.

By the time fire fighters arrived on the scene smoke was billowing high into the air from the old shingled structure. Flames had broken out in the living room, dining room, kitchen and library.

A full force of volunteer fire fighters worked steadily for more than a half hour before the blaze was completely extinguished. They were forced to cave in a large section of one wall and chop away sections of the shingling on the roof.

No estimate has yet been made on damage to the furnishings of the home. Pamela Smith, member of the Carmel Unified District School Board and daughter of the Dormodys said this week the inside is totally destroyed.

Fire department reports indicate that structural damage to the house is such that it can be reconstructed. Mrs. Smith said the house dates back to the early part of this century. Her parents have lived there for nearly 45 years, she said.

Testament for tomorrow

By GUNNAR NORBERG
Carmel City Councilman

Sometimes readers who follow this column, and who are generally in favor of providing the kind of special protection for the Carmel and Carmel Valley areas which I have advocated, wonder why I do not urge that more effort be made just to annex the areas beyond Carmel city limits to the City of Carmel itself.

Such readers are quite willing to support the concept of protection envisaged by what I have called the Heritage City plan, but they feel that the chance of securing state legislation to set up such an entirely new kind of city entity is either too slight or too remote. At the same time they suggest that the usual kind of annexation effort to enlarge the area of the City of Carmel, could help indirectly to advance the day when the Heritage City plan could become law, while at the same time placing an ever larger Carmel area under a single local government, and thus taking jurisdiction over more and more of presently unincorporated Carmel out of the often unfeeling hands of county government over in Salinas.

Here I would like to point out to such readers as may not be familiar with it, that all Carmel city councils, at least for the past ten years, have been perfectly willing to consider the annexation of any or all of the unincorporated areas adjacent to the City of Carmel. The reasons why such annexations have not taken place, have been the stumbling blocks placed in the way of such annexations by lawyers representing property owners who -- at a given time -- did not want their individual properties annexed.

Until now the steps to be taken to achieve annexation of territory to existing cities, are the steps provided by what is the essentially archaic "Annexation Act of 1913." One of the steps in that 62-year-old annexation statute, has long allowed the owners of just over one-half of the land in any proposed annexation, to terminate any such annexation proposal, before voters in the area involved have even had a chance to express themselves at the ballot box.

During the past year, decisions of state courts have acted to invalidate this particular portion of that 1913 Annexation Act, but the legislature has not yet acted to amend the 1913 law to give definitive effect to those court decisions.

Since the value of houses or other buildings in any area proposed for annexation, have not counted in the process of determining that 50 per cent-or-more of property ownership, which has been needed to stop any annexation proposal from going to a vote of the people, have objected to annexation, sometimes only a relatively few owners of large parcels of generally unimproved land, have been able to terminate annexation proceedings.

In the future it seems likely -- because of those recent court decisions -- that annexation efforts will no longer be halted before an actual election is held in any area proposed for annexation.

Because of this, annexation efforts to be made from now on, are likely to have a better chance of success than preceding ones have.

Besides there is soon likely to be an easily recognized dollars-and-cents inducement to those considering annexation. In fact, the inducement is probably already here, but public awareness of the possibility of such a dollars-and-cents advantage, does not yet appear to exist.

For many years county government provided essentially free fire protection services to the unincorporated areas adjacent to the City of Carmel. This fire protection was provided through a county contract with the State Division of Forestry, and the cost of this contract was paid out of the county "general fund" -- a fund derived from taxes drawn equally from the entire county -- both inside of cities and outside of cities.

Eventually the state legislature acted to stop this use of the county "general fund" because the fire protection given to urbanized unincorporated areas such as those outside of Carmel, was not given equally to all the other parts of the county.

The present result of this legislative edict, in the urbanized unincorporated areas just outside of the City of Carmel, is that taxpayers in those areas are -- in this fiscal year -- paying just over a dollar-per-$100-of-assessed-valuation for the single service of fire protection. Even so, the fire-protection rating in those urbanized unincorporated Carmel areas, is not as good as that given to the fire-protection service inside the City of Carmel. Because of this, it is likely that the higher cost of fire insurance in the urbanized unincorporated Carmel areas, along with that one dollar-per-$100-of-assessed-valuation for a special fire-protection tax collected by county government, already exceeds the entire tax for all Carmel city services, including fire protection, which now is $1.10-per-$100-of-assessed-valuation.

Since the county tax for this fire protection rose by slightly more than 12-cents-per-$100-of-assessed-valuation just from the 1973-74 fiscal year to the 1974-75 fiscal year, it is entirely possible that next summer the county board of supervisors could decide to hike the outside-of-Carmel fire-protection tax beyond the total property tax which the City of Carmel would be likely to charge in the coming fiscal year for all the municipal services -- including fire protection -- which it would routinely provide.

Because of this county taxing just for the single service of fire protection in urbanized unincorporated Carmel, it is likely in the future that there could be greater interest on the part of all outside-of-Carmel taxpayers, in giving new and more serious thought to the idea of annexation to the City of Carmel.

And if such annexation were to begin to take place, the enlarged City of Carmel could stand a better chance -- in a more distant future -- to prevail upon the state legislature to promulgate laws required to put into operation the much stronger Heritage City form of government which I have repeatedly proposed.

The mayor's report

By BERNARD ANDERSON

Carmel has prided itself in keeping its beach clean and free of distractions such as hamburger vendors, etc. Occasionally a dog experiencing the joy of racing along the surf gets out of hand, but these canines also seem to appreciate one of the last of the ocean beaches where they enjoy the unfettered freedom and behave accordingly.

In view of our customary wool clothing weather, we haven't been concerned with nudity problems either, as a matter-of-fact the male chauvinist crowd occasionally expresses regrets on the absence of the more hardy variety of female species ready to brave the chilly beach winds in the brevity of the bikini.

We are always open to suggestions for enhancing the use of our lovely white beach sands, but regrettably we must turn down the proposal made on the return of one of our constantly touring fraternity. He extolled the virtues of a three-piece bathing suit he had seen in the Caribbean and recommended its adoption in Carmel. However, upon investigation it was found the three-piece suit consisted of a hat, sandals and goggles.

Just to find out how other people observe beach decorum, we secured a proclamation from the Bermuda Department of Tourism. Here it is!

Proclamation! - modes of dress in ye Bermuda isles "WHEREAS the people of these islands may be offended by certain improper accoutrements, it is deemed helpful for those who come to these shores to know:

LADIES are not expected to appear on the streets barefooted, or in such extremely abbreviated costumes as bathing suits. HAIR CURLERS are NOT acceptable in public places anywhere.

GENTLEMEN are requested to wear shirts at all times. Bathing trunks and bare feet are not acceptable in the public thoroughfares.

AFTER 6 p.m. local night life calls for ladies to wear dresses, pant suits or skirts of some kind; and gentlemen jackets and ties.

CYCLISTS are most urgently advised to wear a safety helmet whilst operating their machines."

The End

The last several years has seen a terrific proliferation of planning conferences. As the world keeps shrinking, population increases, per capita automobile ownership keeps expanding and more two home family residences becomes the mode, we become increasingly aware of shrinking elbow room. Without doubt these are some of the reasons for what seems a last ditch attempt by public and civic officials to exercise some control over their living areas through the formulation of wise guidelines which will deal fairly with the interests of all.

But the sessions of the Monterey County Planning Council, held at Asilomar on March 1st, was one of the most worthwhile planning meetings I have attended. Ed DeMars, the Monterey County Planning Commissioner, is to be complimented on the panel dissertations presented. There wasn't a panel member who hadn't done his homework, whether the subject was on efficient planning administration, planning and the law or the state of planning. And the packed audience consisting of constructionists, developers, environmentalists, attorneys, wildlife enthusiasts, nature lovers, etc., completed the seminars with a feeling of a better understanding of each others' interests.

I was particularly impressed by a statement made by the keynote speaker, Robert Williams. "The reason for town hall meetings is to maintain a semblance of democracy." "There are those who wish to hide behind stacks of information to avoid making a decision" He is so right. Those of us who are in public office must make decisions and it isn't going to be easy to thread a path through the maze of diverse individual interests for the maximum benefit of all. But decisions must be made and "whoever throws themselves into the barb wire first is very likely to get badly scratched."

The Asilomar sessions were excellent and had no resemblance to the description of a giraffe as described by a delegate to his fiftieth or so planning meeting. "A giraffe is a horse put together at a planning meeting."

I'm looking forward to next year's sessions.

Wind damage heavy in Carmel

The worst wind damage in five years hit Carmel last week according to City Forester Greg D'Ambrosio.

Four large trees, cypress, acacia and two pines, were destroyed by wind along with a multitude of smaller bushy trees, D'Ambrosio said.

Most of the damage was confined to Scenic Drive and

A TEMPORARY POWER pole had to be used to support power lines knocked out by a falling tree last Friday morning at Santa Fe and Fourth streets. Winds caused heavy damage in Carmel last week.

San Antonio Avenue. However, one large tree felled by wind, on the corner of Santa Fe and Fourth, knocked out power lines Friday at 1 a.m. The tree also took out three smaller trees when it fell. Workmen installed a temporary pole to hold lines knocked down by the tree.

The three members of the city's forestry department worked around the clock from 1:30 a.m. Friday to attempt to save some trees damaged by the wind and clean up debris. Crews were put on an emergency basis because of the extensive damage. The entire public works department work force had been put on cleanup duty. D'Ambrosio estimated that it would take the remainder of this week to clean up remaining debris.

Schull, Moser

Two sanitary district board members criticized

Two members of the Carmel Sanitary District Board of Directors received sharp criticism from other members of the board Tuesday night. Board President Herman Schull and member Earl Moser were accused of taking on too much personal responsibility for the operation of the district and meddling in the management of the district sewage treatment facility.

Discussion over the limits of individual board member's powers was initiated by Jim Pruitt, who introduced a resolution which would have imposed definite divisions between the responsibility of the board and District Manager Max Drewien. The resolution would have charged the board with responsibilities for establishing policy for the district, and the district manager with complete responsibility for managing sanitary plant operations on a day to day basis.

While the board decided to table the resolution indefinitely—agreeing that such constraints on the relationship of the board and its staff should be avoided unless absolutely necessary—the specific incidents were brought out for open discussion.

Pruitt stated that during the fall when the district was experiencing problems with digestion of sludge at the treatment facility, Schull had called in a local biologist to tour the plant and advise the district on their problems. The board president did this, Pruitt said, without consulting the other members of the board or the district engineer. The board had received a bill for the biologist's services, but were not aware that that bill had been paid, he said.

Acknowledging that he had invited professional consultation without board sanction, Schull objected to the proposed resolution which would have imposed guidelines for the authority of the board president. "You've got to trust the president of the board. What we really need is an executive officer to act as a spokesman for the board, and handle these things. If you don't want to designate one member of the board as an executive officer you've got to hire one." He concluded that the proposed resolution would "hamstring us."

When questioned about another incident which he had referred to as "one board member causing disharmony" down at the plant, Pruitt stated that members of the treatment plant staff had complained about Moser spending a great deal of time down at the plant.

The complaints were articulated further by board member Ted Weller who said "it was a continuous day by day watching, looking at (plant) logs, upsetting the routine of the lab, and being continually underfoot. They were taking excessive time to explain and clarify."

Weller emphasized that the "problem had been resolved," and that no complaints had been received for months. Moser objected to the remark that he had been to the plant on a day by day basis. When he asked plant manager Max Drewien to support his statement that he had been down to the plant no more than twice a week, Drewien identified the main source of complaint.

"The main thing that set it off was when he (Moser) told (plant manager) Mike Parades we didn't have enough technical knowledge down here. That's a man who has been with us for 23 years, and that hurt him very deeply. He was ready to resign right there," exclaimed Drewien.

In agreeing to table the proposed resolution, at least three members of the board seemed to concur with a remark by Tom Hudson, a Monterey attorney and a long time critic of the board. "I'm glad to see these things brought out in the open. When problems like this are brought out in public discussion, they have a tendency to go away," he said.

EXHIBITS AT THE Friends of Photography gallery feature top local and nationally renowned photographers.

Friends promote visual literacy

By TOM LUECK

"Very few individuals are able to read photographs. Even fewer are prepared to understand and appreciate the literature of photographic images and their history.

"...the Friends of Photography is attempting to eliminate the condition of visual illiteracy for the enrichment of all."

As defined in a statement of purpose by its board of trustees, the main thrust of the Friends of Photography since its inception in 1967 has been the development of the medium of photography as "visual literature." Operating out of galleries at the north wing of Sunset Center, the "Friends" have developed a wide range of programs which reach an international membership.

One of the founders of the organization, along with Ansel Adams, Brett Weston, and others, was Wynn Bullock. Along with increased interest in the Friends, he has witnessed an enormous increase in the popularity of photography.

"There has been an enormous growth in interest in photography," he states. "But people have been conditioned by commercial claims that 'you press the shutter and we do the rest,' which is totally falacious. That's fine for people who don't know anything about photography..."

"It (photography) can do so many things. It can document, instruct, entertain. At first I was a little put off by that term 'visual literacy,' because it brings to mind writing."

"But photography is like writing in that it can be a language. A photograph can be of thoughts, as well as what you see," he states.

A non-profit organization, the Friends is supported in large part by its dues-paying membership. Over the eight years since the old library in Sunset Center was fitted out for use as a gallery, membership has grown to 1,400. More than half that membership is from within California, but it extends as far as Europe, Africa and the Far East.

As such, it is a unique organization. It is neither a museum nor educational institution. The main function of the Friends is to service the interests of its membership, most of whom are relatively well versed in the history and current trends of "visual literature." Another function is to make photographic art available to as many people as possible throughout the country.

One project undertaken is publication of a critical photographic journal, "Untitled." Distributed free to members, and sold to bookstores, the journal presents reproductions of new photographs, essays and letters by photographers, and serious criticism of trends in the photographic medium—often with an emphasis on the avant garde.

Another program supervised by the Friends is annual seminars. In addition to several weekend workshops during the course of the year, two longer sessions are held each year. This year an Easter

Sunset Views:

By FRANK H. RILEY
Director, SCCC

Once again we bring you word of a week full of opportunities for enjoyment at Sunset Center.

Today, Mr. Avila and the Carmel High School band and other units of the school music department will be playing in the Sunset Center Theatre, once from 9 to 12 in the morning; and then again from 7 to 10 in the evening. You are invited to attend not only to enjoy the music but also to see for yourself what is being done about the musical education of our young people.

Tomorrow, Friday, the 14th, you should enjoy the superb photography and the personal narrative by Jonathan Hagar who, through the Explorama series, will be showing his latest adventure film, "Romance of Romania." Showtime is 8:15 p.m. Advance ticket sale is at Julia Marlow Tickets, Room No. 8A, at Sunset Center. Phone 624-9446.

Skipping over to Tuesday, the 18th, we invite you to join us for noontime luncheon movies at 12 Noon in Room No. 20 (Mission Street door) where we will be showing "Operating Room D," a film about open-heart surgery narrated by Jose Ferrer; "Torture Testers," which will explain what the "UL" label on all your electrical appliances means; and we will conclude with "A World is Born," which will show what the first two billion years of Earth's history was like, accompanied by Leopold Stokowski and the Philadelphia Orchestra playing the "Rites of Spring" sequence from Disney's "Fantasia."

There is no charge for admission and everyone is welcome.

The March 25, Tuesday, program will be the last of this series for the 1974-75 season. We would like your comments so that we can consider them in planning whether or not to continue a similar program next season.

Another final for the season will be the Tuesday night 8 p.m. showing of the Hamburg Opera Company's "Zar und Zimmerman" or "The Czar and the Carpenter" by Albert Lortzing. This will be the seventh and final performance in a series of grand opera films co-sponsored by Sunset Center and Monterey Peninsula College. The films all featured the Hamburg State Opera and the Hamburg Philharmonic Orchestra; and they were supplied to us by the Embassy of the Federal Republic of Germany, to whom we extend much thanks. As for all of the performances in the series, there will be no admission charge for "Zar und Zimmerman."

Thursday, the 20th, being the Third Thursday in March, is the day for another free film program. We will be screening, "Mark Twain's America," an historical and literary documentary along with a short film, "60 Cycles," about the world's longest bike race. In this day of renewed interest in cycling, this could be timely.

Still offering free goodies, we invited you to return on Thursday evening at 8:15 p.m. to hear the annual free spring concert by the Watsonville Band. For several years the band has been coming to Sunset Center to offer a free concert for the people of Carmel. The City's Cultural Center is pleased to offer its facilities to house the program. We hope that you, and the citizens, will avail yourselves of this opportunity to hear a really rousing, old-fashioned community band concert.

Finally, on Friday, the 21st, at 8 p.m., the Carmel Music Society will present a concert by two highly regarded musical artists. Glenn Dicterow, violinist, and James Fields, pianist, will combine their talents to provide an evening of chamber music selections. To obtain ticket information, call 624-2085.

In between events, plan a little extra time to look at some of the various exhibits on view at the Center. You will find exhibits in the Marjorie Evans Gallery (daily except Saturday and Sunday, 1 to 5 p.m. - free). The Sunset Center Theatre foyer (before and during all theatre events - free) and the Friends of Photography Gallery (daily except Mondays, 1 to 5 p.m. - free).

Exhibits now showing or scheduled are:

Marjorie Evans Gallery - to March 14 - The Art of Gerry Bosch; March 17 to April - Black Graphics

Sunset Center Theatre - to March 17 - Recent Works of Helen Dooley; March 17 to April 14 - Arts and Crafts of the Carmel Foundation.

Friends of Photography - to March 16 - Eikoh Hosoe and Ken Graves; March 24 to April 27 - Ten Teachers from the Bay Area.

You see - there's no doubt about it - Sunset Center is where it is happening!

Soloists set for 'Messiah'

The Monterey Peninsula Choral Society under the direction of Haymo Taeuber, will present Handel's "Messiah," accompanied by the Monterey County Little Symphony Orchestra at Carmel Mission Basilica 8 p.m. Saturday, March 15.

Handel's oratorio is based on Biblical selections of prophecy, the story of the birth, crucifixion and teachings of Jesus. Handel began work on the score on August 22, 1741 and the inspiration which possessed him kept him constantly writing and working at such intensity that 23 days later he had finished the 265 pages of the score and the instrumentation.

Soloists for the Oratorio are Gwen Curatilo, soprano, heard recently with the Choral Society in the Christmas concerts at Carmel Mission, John Miller, bass, who performed in Haydn's "Creation" with the Choral Society last year. Glenna De Weese, contralto and James Hull, tenor, have performed with the Choral Society many times.

Miss Curatilo sang for six seasons with the San Francisco Opera Company and was for five years permanent soloist with San Francisco's renowned "Bach to Mozart Group." She has been featured soloist for the Iverness Festival, and she teaches as opera director as well as voice and diction instructor both at the Dominican College in San Rafael and Chico State University.

John Miller performed with San Francisco Opera Company for two seasons, and has been featured as soloist with the Oakland

GWEN CURATILO

Symphony and the William Hall Chorale in Los Angeles. He has also been the soloist at Grace Cathedral in San Francisco.

Tickets are $3.50 for Carmel Mission and are available at the various Symphony outlets.

Dicterow - Fields concert planned

Violinist Glenn Dictorow and pianist James Fields will present a concert Friday evening, March 21, 8 p.m., at Carmel's Sunset Center Theatre.

The young California-born musicians are being presented by the Carmel Music Society as part of the Society's Young California Artist program.

Friends since childhood, Dictorow and Fields have fused their talents and play together regularly. Their concerts often include chamber music for violin and piano.

Glenn Dictorow made his debut with the Los Angeles Philharmonic when he was eleven. Since that time he has gone on to win top awards at prestigious international competitions and appears with many of the country's leading orchestras.

In 1972, at age 23, he joined the Philharmonic as associate concertmaster. In addition to his appearances with the Los Angeles Philharmonic under Zubin Mehta and others, Dictorow has fulfilled successful solo engagements with the New York Philharmonic, San Francisco Symphony, Indianapolis Symphony, Seattle Symphony, and New Jersey Symphony, under such conductors as Josef Krips, Arthur Fiedler, Milton Katims, Andre Kostalanetz, and Henry Lewis.

Dictorow has been heard coast-to-coast in solo recitals and has also presented master classes on various university campuses. Among the numerous awards he has received are the Young Musicians Foundation Grant, Los Angeles; the Kimber and Julia Klumpkey awards, San Francisco; the Merriweather Post Competition, Washington, D.C.; the Coleman Chamber Music Award, Los Angeles (twice); and in 1970 he was the only American violinist among the top laureates in Moscow's International Tchaikovsky Competition.

James Fields, 26, is a winner of the coveted Leventritt International Piano Competition.

Fields has played extensively throughout North America, Europe, Central and South America, and as soloist with orchestra has performed with many of the world's great orchestras, including the Los Angeles Philharmonic, San Francisco Symphony, the Philadelphia Orchestra, the Pittsburgh Symphony, the Cleveland Orchestra and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, to name only a few.

Fields has been awarded many honors, including the Debut Grant of the Young Musicians Foundation 1965 National Competition and first prize of the 1971 Oakland Symphony Competition.

Addis and Crofut schedule concert

Addis and Crofut, known as explorers in song, will be presented as the final concert in the series presented by the Monterey Peninsula Concert Association on Saturday, March 15, at 8:15 p.m. at the Pacific Grove Junior High School Auditorium.

Addis and Crofut became friends in high school days when one played oboe and the other French horn. Addis majored in music at Harvard under Walter Piston, and after graduate study in New York with John Cage became a teacher and writer for Musical America Magazine. Crofut majored in music at Allegheny College, where a concert by Pete Seeger attracted him to the banjo. Drafted, he served in Korea entertaining troops and later at the invitation of Japan's Prince Mikasa organized adult music recreation programs all over Japan. As a result he won a State Department Cultural Affairs grant to tour Southeast Asia. Addis joined him in Hong Kong and the partnership was born.

Their instruments range from guitar to piano and harpsichord, and from five string banjo to Asian Tranh to African thumb piano. The repertoire combines a knowledge of American Blues and folk idiom with songs from old world sources in Europe and fellow musicians in Asia and Africa. They have insisted that music has to be learned country by country so as to reflect the quality of the people it belongs to. Their reputation for authenticity has resulted in four "Cultural Exchange" world tours, several invitations to the White House, and the award of a Presidential Citation for their contribution toward "mutual understanding between the people of the United States and the people of friendly nations abroad."

and on the Walter Cronkite evening news.

They have several recordings employing a variety of musical concepts and instruments, but in their concerts still resist writing a program, wanting the freedom to keep changing and responding to what moves them at the time.

The concert association is presently conducting its membership drive. New members for the next season of five concerts will be admitted to this concert. Cost is $10.00 for adults and $5.00 for children through high school. Memberships may be purchased the night of the concert. For further information call 375-3544.

The late Senator Robert F. Kennedy and jazz musician Dave Brubeck have each paid glowing tribute to them. On television, Addis and Crofut have been featured numerous times on both the Johnny Carson and the TODAY Show, as well as a special for CBS Camera 3,

THE MUSIC CORNER

BY IRVING W. GREENBERG

A CLASSICAL CHAMBER MUSIC CONCERT

The Japan Trio (Yoko Matsuda, violin; Tsuyoshi Tsutsumi, cello; and Yuko Ninomiya, piano), as the fifth offering of the present season of the Monterey Peninsula Chamber Music Society on March 5, gave a performance of grace, refinement and elegance in three piano trios of F.J. Haydn, Dvorak, and Mendelssohn, respectively. The elements of fine chamber music playing were all there — beautiful intonation, excellent dynamics, and fine interpretive orientation to the classical-romantic idiom. Wherever verve and vivacity was required, it was there in abundance; where lyricism and a flowing melodic line was indicated, it, too, appeared in good measure during the course of the evening.

In the Andante of the Haydn Trio No. 1 in G major, the suave, sonorous thematic material was exposed in a display of zestful accentuation, in perfect unison. Inasmuch as Haydn gave the piano the most important role, it was to be expected that the pianist would perform with undisguised bravura and in an involved, idiomatic manner. The two strings were in a subordinate position, but they were most effective in lending tonal color and weight to the rendition. The amazing organic unity of the work was further emphasized in the Adagio, where the mellifluous tonality, with its successive variations in diverse episodes, was asserted with melodic interplay of the violin and the piano, the cello here being relegated in the role of a continuo. The fine sense of balance was accurately established, with this cantabile movement coming through with finesse and romantic subtlety. Although, at times the tempi were rather slow, still this did not seriously vitiate the reading of this movement. The Finale, a Gypsy Rondo, really a headlong and high-spirited Presto, is very familiar to audiences, because of its being often played out of context as a tour de force by chamber ensembles. It was exceedingly well played with pianistic virtuosity, and a string tone full of luxuriousness. The perfect integration of the three instruments resulted in a performance of brilliance.

The Dvorak Trio in F minor, Op. 65, is one of the composer's most moving composition, mirroring, as it does, his ambivalent feelings of gloom and defiance. It is built on very strong lines, and the open notes of the dramatic first movement were most effectively delineated, with the piano emphasizing the thematic context in a buoyant mood. There was a keen awareness of the subtle lyric line, and its rendition was conceived responsively and stimulatingly. The musical contours were stated with a passionate and meditative definition. The forceful Scherzo, though not actually employing an actual Czech dance form, breathes a nationalistic spirit. The long, spun-out melodies, as well as the short symmetrically balanced themes, were exhibited with a lovely tonal sheen, in which musical values were clearly defined. Arpeggi and trills, as well as glissandi, were particularly evocative, and an aura of limpid and impeccable composure persisted. Beautiful bowing line, and accurate fingering also helped to shape this movement.

The simplicity of the Adagio, first sparked by a lovely passage by the cello, was stated with romantic phrasing, with clarity, and with a controlled youthful ardor. Emotionalized feelings were deeply and intuitively in evidence. The Finale, in a typical Dvorak folk dance form, the furiant, was paced exultantly and vigorously, which, alternating with soft, lyric passages of extreme beauty, resulted in a total projection of this trio that was personalized, sonorous, and exhilarating. The skeletal ornamentation and embroidery was augmented with expressiveness, and with a tonal richness. This performance could be identified with the best chamber music ensembles.

The character of the Mendelssohn Trio No. 1 in D minor was established in the main theme of the first movement, introduced magnificently by the cello, and superbly taken up by the violin. This thematic material, though in not the usual motivistic and fragmented form, was nevertheless exposed in a graceful and sustained cantabile in a variety of ingenious aspects, with rhapsodic and emotional responsiveness. The exquisite, shimmering pianistic passages were highly oriented to the romantic-classical idiom of the composer. The idyllic nature of the Andante, in a brief display of musical ideas by violin and cello, sank into a reverie of sentiment and immersion, but without any adhering sentimentality. The violinistic tone was emphatically secure. The smooth, gossamer-light third movement is a typical Mendelssohnian scherzo, in the nature and spirit of that heard in the "Midsummer's Night Dream." The airy pianissimo was full of spirit with the accompanying two strings in a supportive involvement, but not subordinate, translating this movement to an ebullience of sound. In the romantic Finale, the fiery impulses were somewhat ameliorated by basic variants, and by the wonderful expressive pianissimi. The violin response was with clear sonority and the fast tempi were very well asserted without any exaggerated effects. The exuberant Coda that brought this trio to its triumphant conclusion, was conceived in a brilliant vein with a singing line of melodic verity.

It was a most compelling evening of excellent chamber music playing by a remarkable young ensemble.

NEW RECORDINGS

FLUTE CONCERTOS — TARTINI, BOCCHERINI, MERCADANTE — (Serverino Gazzelloni, flute, with I Musici — Philips 6500.611).

These three flute concertos are all works of composers whose musical preeminence is in other fields of musical creativity: Tartini, in violin; Boccherini in cello; and Mercadante, in opera. Yet, all these works have all a common heritage — Italian Settecento lyricism and vitality.

In the Tartini concerto, Mr. Gazzelloni, one of Europe's most prestigious flautists, exposes the dotted rhythmic thematic material with an inordinate sense of interpretive skill and technical virtuosity. His playing is astounding in the many facets of exquisite flute characteristics, and in his conceptual and episodic rendition.

In the Boccherini concerto, the soloist exhibits a clear awareness of the classical concept of this work. His playing in the baroque, stylistic manner is a model of chromatic tonal coloration as well as of inspired and erudite interpretation.

The Mercadante concerto, belonging to the Neapolitan School, in its main features but heavily influenced by the classic formulae of the Viennese composers, was played by Mr. Gazzelloni with astounding tempi and with unbelievable breath control, particularly evident in the final allegro vivace. The bright conception of the soloist in the opening movement, his magnificent exposition of the semi-operatic nature of the Largo, and his extraordinary display of the dotted rhythms and syncopated effects of the "rondo russo" in the final movement, give to this work its exciting, glowing and effective luminosity.

The I Musici, an ensemble that is justly famous for its wonderful baroque and classical interpretations, accompanies the soloist with a sensitive, finely-styled and vigorous involvement.

Philips' imported surfaces are technically perfect; the tone quality is suave and resplendent. This disc is unreservedly recommended as a vivid example of exquisite flute performances.

BEETHOVEN: PIANO SONATA NO. 31 in A flat, Op. 110; PIANO SONATA NO. 32 in C minor, Op. 111 (Stephen Bishop, pianist — Philips 6500.764).

The Sonata No. 31 in A flat, Op. 110, is in three movements, with the first movement in sonata form, the theme of which becomes very important at the sonata's end. The second movement, a scherzo, is folklike and, at the same time, sophisticated. It is both crude and highly civilized, smooth flowing and abrupt. The last movement begins with a long, slow introduction. The fugue, which makes up the body of the movement, is related to the opening theme of the first movement. Then, at what appears to be the climax of the fugue, there is a sudden interruption and the slow introduction is played again in a slightly altered form. The fugue then resumes upside down. It is next played in diminution and in the original version. The fugue is probably the most sensuously appealing of all of Beethoven's later fugues, making this sonata the most popular one of the composer's last five works in this form.

The Sonata No. 32 in C minor, Op. 11, has a slow introduction. The following Allegro begins as a fugato, but leads to the second theme which is homophonic, both in melody and harmony. The second movement is a theme and variations. There is, in these variations, not only an intellectual factor, but also an emotional quality, as intense as it is reserved. As the variations follow one another, one becomes increasingly aware of a philosophical concept — the nobility and individuality of Man, as conceived by Beethoven. This tendency is manifested by a certain sparseness of texture, by a economy of means based on the matter at hand, and by an unwillingness to become involved with extraneous musical ideas.

Stephen Bishop is one of the most gifted and accomplished pianists of the younger generation, and, as such, he was bound to give these two works an exposure of intense technical virtuosity, as well as an effective emotional and interpretive display. His playing of the arpeggi and trills, his conception of the tonal gradations of the various movements, and his passionate evocation of the fugue contents (especially of Op. 110), all add up to a performance of stature, dignity and musical opulence. In addition, his exquisite development of the thematic figurations, as well as his marvellously rich modulating patterns, are additional marks of a pianist of unusual orientation to the Beethoven idiom in this genre.

The surfaces are absolutely quiet; the sound is brilliant, and this disc bears a label unhesitating recommendation.

Coastal master plan public implementation hearings set

Five basic alternatives for implementation of a coastal master plan are outlined in the hearing draft issued Friday by the California Coastal Commission for consideration at public hearings during the next two months.

The 400-page document is the result of public hearings held by the state Coastal Commission and the six regional boards mandated by Proposition 20 to regulate coastal development while the plan was being prepared and to prepare and plan for the future of the California coast.

The Central Coastal Regional Commission will hold a local hearing on the preliminary plan at 7 p.m. on May 6 at the Carmel Sunset Cultural Center. Similar hearings will be held at about 20 other locations throughout the state beginning April 17 at Fort Bragg.

In addition to the nine policy elements developed in the past year, the plan lists five alternatives for implementation one of which will ultimately be recommended to the legislature for adoption. The five options include:

Multi-purpose state agency. The plan outlines this alternative with responsibilities not only to carry out the coastal plan, but also in related areas, such as statewide land use planning, transportation, energy supply, control of air and water quality.

Under this alternative, the plan suggests, carrying out the coastal plan could be the responsibility of a division or department within a "very large and powerful agency."

Forestry Commission requests $10,000 fund

The Carmel Forestry Commission is forwarding a request to the City Council for a $10,000 "special projects fund" to be included in next years public works department budget. The money would be used by the city's forestry crew for landscaping, development of "miniparks" along city streets and other projects.

Members of the commission agreed to the request at a meeting last Tuesday afternoon in City Council chambers. They agreed that the fund be created on a contingency basis, with no expenditures being made prior to council approval, and that the funds should be appropriated out of hostelry tax revenues.

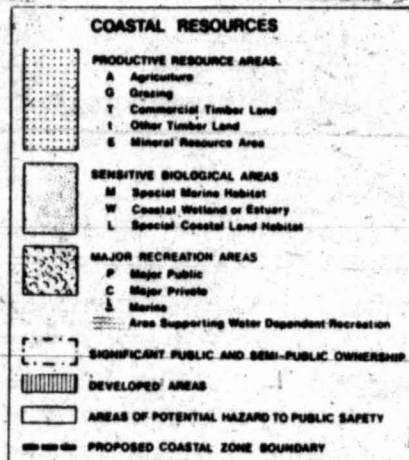

City Forester Greg D'Ambrosio told the commission that there are a variety of projects which could be afforded by such a fund. One project was viewed as most pressing -- landscaping and improvements along the Carpenter Street entrance to Carmel from Highway 1.

The condition of the Carpenter Street entrance has often been the subject of discussion by the commission in recent months. The foresters have expressed a desire for planting and routine maintenance along the sides of Carpenter Street, but have been confronted with the problem that a portion of that entrance to the city lies on county land.

D'Ambrosio's crew.

Another budget request of $655 was agreed to by the commission. That sum would cover the costs of a "SYMAP" computer programming system to be used in the forest-inventory efforts of the forestry crew.

D'Ambrosio explained that the system would make possible computer produced maps of the city forest. While a computer at the Monterey Naval Postgraduate School has been used for two years in calculating Carmel's tree population through a compilation of random tree counts, no visual documents have been made available, D'Ambrosio said.

While in theory this agency could provide for coordination among highway construction, agricultural land policies and water quality control, the plan points out the coordination would depend on the priorities established through enabling legislation. The plan suggests coastal protection under this option would be "unlikely to receive the high priority" given under Proposition 20. (An alternative under this option would be a statewide agency with multi-purpose regional agencies.)

Single statewide agency. With no regional components, this option would be the most economical, the plan suggests. The state agency would do all coastal planning and regulation under the coastal plan and local governments would continue present functions and authority. Drawbacks to such an alternative would include highly increased workloads for the state agency, difficulty in dealing with diversity of coastal areas, exclusion of local government representation, reduction of public membership and lack of accessibility, the plan suggests.

State coastal agency with regional components. Pointing out that perhaps the current structure of a state commission and six regional commissions could be continued, the plan also suggests utilizing an option with regional and statewide representatives with regional offices but not commissions.

Implementation entirely by local government. No state coastal agency would be established under this option, but existing state agencies (such as the Departments of Transportation, Fish and Game or Parks and Recreation) could be directed to carry out coastal plan policies within their areas of responsibility.

If this option were selected, one way to achieve it would be to require through legislation that each local government develop within its master plan an element consistent with the coastal plan.

The preliminary plan notes such advantages to this option as public accessibility, and efficient, economical operation. The disadvantages it enumerates include:

- No comprehensive view of the coastal zone.
- Likelihood of varying interpretations and applications of coastal policies.
- Difficulties in revision.
- Questions of adequacy in protection of coastal resources of statewide importance.
- Effectiveness of single-purpose agencies in a total planning field.

Additionally, the preliminary plan points out that many of the adopted policies of the commission have state-wide coastal implications and may be beyond the scope of local governments to administer alone. The preliminary plan concludes: "Local implementation of the coastal plans could not adequately protect... statewide interests without some kind of effective coordinating agency."

Primary implementation through local governments with a state coastal agency. According to the preliminary plan, this option would assure most policies would be carried out

Supervisors direct dam study

After ascertaining their request would in no way commit them to an expensive multipurpose dam, the Monterey County Board of Supervisors directed the Army Corps of Engineers Tuesday to proceed with a detailed study of Alternative 1 in their most recent flood control study.

Alternative 1 calls for an earth-filled dam over 400 feet high at a cost of $59.9 million, estimated in 1974, at the San Clemente site.

Project director Jim Huebner of the Corps of Engineers explained why the corps had requested a directive from the board of supervisors. "With five alternatives, if we attempted to make a detailed study of all of them, we would run out of money very quickly. Since the board is the logical sponsor of any construction project which may be assumed at any point in the future, we need an indication of what you want studied," he told the board.

Chairman Roger Poyner queried, "Will our encouragement of further study in any way preclude consideration of the other alternatives in your study or perhaps from other sources?" Huebner replied, "Absolutely not."

Lois Moser, representing the League of Women Voters, read a letter to the board raising numerous questions about cost, financing, necessity of a dam and alternative water supply, pointing out that under the corps' Urban Study few, if any groups polled indicated flood control as a high priority.

Sterling Atkinson of Del Monte Properties also addressed the board. "As one of the largest, if not the largest, water customers on the Peninsula, we are concerned about the adequacy of present and future water supplies. We believe Alternative 1 is definitely worthy of further investigation. Additional information must be developed so appropriate financial analysis can be made. We urge you to endorse further study of this alternative."

Supervisor R. Edwin Norris said that "Although I am not particularly enamored of such a high dam, my greatest interest is in water supply."

Chairman Poyner said he concurred with the letter from the League of Women Voters, but that he also had to look at the possibilities for financing the project at low interest rates over long periods of time (up to 90 years). "Another contingency is Congressional approval," he said, pointing out the close perusal the cost benefit ratio would receive.

Before the unanimous approval issued by the board, Supervisor Warren Church said, "We must realize that, in the long run, the only way to solve a water problem is to reduce the long range demand."

Q. I have dandruff. What causes my scalp to flake?

Fl. Ord, Calif.

A. There is no one definite answer to your problem. Many things will cause the scalp to flake. Fine powdery flakes can be caused from using alkaline shampoos and other alkaline products which can cause a heat irritation when combined with the normal acid mantle of the scalp. Combine vinegar (acidic) and baking soda (alkaline) in a glass and see what chemically evolves. Excess sugar or salt in the diet can also cause flaking. Medicines and drugs, high fevers, illness, allergies, infection and malnutrition or lack of vitamins, minerals and proteins can also cause scalp irritations, as can excessive smoking and even emotional tension.

Actual dandruff, or the increased activity and number of fungi and bacterial organisms, is usually a more severe symptom and generally a seborrheal condition, which can best be treated by a skin and scalp specialist trained in the field of medical cases of psoriasis, eczema, infectious fungi and severe dandruff.

Everyone during his life is plagued at one time or another, to some extent with the problem of dandruff. When it is present, the scalp (and often other parts of the body) has a tendency to eliminate epidermal cells (dead skin cells) which are clustered in the form of scales. The overall rate of cell production also has a tendency to increase during these periods. These epidermal changes are often accompanied by excessive itching and/or a burning sensation to add to the victim's discomfort, often more prevalent in cold, dry weather.

To my knowledge there is no "sure-cure" dandruff shampoo or preparation to cure it, so we simply have to try to alleviate the discomfort while trying to have the victim pinpoint the cause. Be very careful, however in your selection of a dandruff shampoo as some are reputed to cause permanent hair loss, dry up the natural oils of the scalp, skin eruptions classified as contact dermatitis, or serious damage to the hair. Ask a hair expert.

Carmel charivari

By PAUL SIDONE

It's a bummer, right?

Isn't it time we became language conscious? The inarticulate mumblings of public speakers, television performers, college students and young people are driving those of us who were trained by strict grammarians right up the classroom wall. It is very hard for us lovers of the language of Shakespeare and F. Scott Fitzgerald to hear the cream of our youth going, "Uh, yeah, well, YA KNOW, like it's a bummer, right?"

I know it's hard for them, exposed in all directions to the mangled syntax of their teachers and public servants. For example the peculiar jargon of the Watergate principals was not the least of the venal fall-out of the expose. We were all exposed to the extremes of mindless grunts, convoluted gobbledegook, and prolix catch-phrases like 'at this point in time.'

Have you every listened intently to a Henry Kissinger being interviewed after one of his peripatetic meetings with the head of a foreign government. He uses words, albeit in the accent of a Dr. Strangelove, that mean absolutely nothing. If the words are sterile, one can only guess at how unfruitful and barren of ideas were the talks.

If our public servants were only fluent in their stock in trade, language, like an Adlai Stevenson, what would they not be able to accomplish; oil agreements, articulate plans to solve our fuel crises, the end of wars.

For example the trouble with our involvement in South East Asia and our aid to Vietnam was that we couldn't say, 'Ngo.'

It is stultifying to listen to a speaker, who, asked about winning the W.C. Fields Comic Golf Tournament, can only describe his climacteric thrills with a three word vocabulary.

Here is the local football hero being interviewed by the editor of the Carmel Pine Cone on how he rescued Racquel Welch from a towering inferno.

E.P.C. How did you feel, Joe, when you finally got your hands on the lovely Miss Welch and dragged her from the burning flames?

Joe Beautiful, man.

E.P.C. How would you describe your emotions on reaching the ground in safety? Joe Fantastic.

E.P.C. How did Miss Welch thank you for your heroism, Joe?

Joe Ah, yeah, well, YA KNOW, like it's a bummer, right?

Then there is language, vitated and diluted by misspellings like this advertisement in MONEY MAGAZINE: 'For men who are serious about acheiving success.'

How can you be serious and beleive such a magazine!

Or the siren summons of local T.V. station, asking you to visit a beauty center and its resident 'beautitian.' The eye of beauty is in the beholder but so is the 'c.'

The failure of the S.L.A. Revolutionary Movement was not the shootout in a Los Angeles suburb or the disappearance of Patty Hearst, it was simply the inability of the group's political leaders to formulate a literate revolutionary manifesto which people could understand. What the late Field Marshal Cinque gave us along with his title, was a parody out of a Grouchy Marx movie.

Mao Tse Tung proclaimed poetically in his little red book the thoughts of Mao, Lenin systematized the complex dialectics of Marx, and the S.L.A. gave us neo-Californian rhetoric.

The new movies get around the problem very ably. The hero or the heroine hardly speaks at all. The script for the leading role is one page long, consisting of seventeen recognizable words such as you would find in a dictionary for elementary school children; the remainder is a melange of method acting elisions; a litany of grunts, gobbles and pregnant ellipses, punctuated with nose picking or lighting a cigarette.

Indeed it is possible for our youngsters to get by on three adjectives - cute, beautiful and fantastic but how will their children ever articulate the iridescence of a sunset, what lyrical magic made Rogers and Astaire dance, what love opposed to set is.

This, then, might be a good time for revival. We could call it, "We Take You at Your Word." There are still many of us who take our words for granted.

'Forum on future' planned

"What lies in store for the future of man?" is the topic question for a forum series at Monterey Peninsula College titled "In Touch with Tomorrows" and will begin with a lecture by Dr. Milton Mayer, a consultant to the Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions, on Saturday, March 15 at 8 p.m. in MPC's Lecture Forum 103.

Mayer's topic will be "The Future of Communications," and will deal with the implications of communication in the near future and how the future mass media will relate to our lives, culture and self-government.

Mayer, a former Carmel resident, has served as lecturer-in-residence in London, Paris, Switzerland and throughout universities and colleges in the United States.

Heinz Hubler, forum coordinator, said the program will include four guest lecturers and will culminate in a "Futures Fair" which will take place on May 17 at MPC. Hubler said the fair will explore the frontiers of the future, and will include exhibits, demonstrations, displays and multi-media presentations.

Robert Theobald, author of "TEG's 1994" and other futuristic novels, will speak on "An Alternative Future for America" on April 11.

Dr. James Dator, professor of political science at the University of Hawaii, will speak on "An Anticipation of the Near Futures" on April 25. The final speaker will be Dr. Walter Strode, urologist and partner of the Straub Clinic Hospital in Honolulu, speaking on "Towards the Future of Health and the Whole Man" on May 16.

Series tickets are $2.50 for all lectures and individual admission to each lecture is $1 general and 50 cents for Associated Students of Monterey Peninsula College. For more information contact MPC Community Services at 373-5522.

REMEMBER WHEN?

50 YEARS AGO:

From the Pine Cone
March 28, 1925

With pride, not only on its own account, but in behalf of its patrons, the Pine Cone Press announces the installation of a Linotype.

This mechanical marvel is especially equipped to serve the subscribers to and advertisers in the Pine Cone, and also the patrons of the printing department.

The increasing circulation of the Pine Cone, and the demands of advertisers and others for more varied typography, induced the Pine Cone to install a Linotype for the quick, accurate and pleasing presentation of the news and features, and the production of superior job work of every character.

The Linotype enables us to set by machine nearly all forms of composition that formerly necessitated tedious work by hand.

"Tamar," the book of poetry by Robinson Jeffers of Carmel, has been released by the publishers and received enthusiastic praise from some of the most prominent critics.

George Sterling is quoted as saying that without doubt Jeffers proves himself one of the foremost American poets. Carmel is proud of having Jeffers in her midst and is particularly pleased that the inspiration for his poems comes from the natural beauties of Carmel and its environs.

Carmel is in direct communication with the Antipodes. At 4:30 last Monday morning, I.H. O'Meara, of Gisborne, New Zealand, and Dr. Claire Foster talked back and forth for half an hour, via radio.

Time to put away your winter vitamin pills and start building your kite, Ernest Calley announces that the Umpteenth Annual Carmel Kite Festival is to be held April 15 at the High School Athletic Field.

The kids have a head start on the adults this year, since about 70 of them are already sawing, hammering, pasting and painting kites in the shop at Sunset under the supervision of their patient, quiet voiced instructor.

There are some changes in the classification, since in addition to the usual 200-foot kites best made, prettiest funniest and adult, there is also to be a patriotic kite, and a father and son classification.

All the Carpenters who offered to donate time and labor to the Youth Center are asked to report Saturday morning at the Youth Center site to Raymond Bohlke, who Mayor Fred Godwin has asked to organize the day's work.

And the sun had better shine on these wonderful people!

10 YEARS AGO:

From the Pine Cone

Considerable opposition developed this week to the proposed location of a municipal corporation yard on the southerly end of Forest Hill Park.

Residents and property owners who live on the edge of the canyon park, on the floor of which a recreation area for senior citizens is situated, telephoned the Pine Cone to express their opposition to the corporation yard proposal. So did the president of the Seniors Club which now enjoys the recreational facilities.

Yesterday afternoon members of the planning commission displayed dismay that the south block of the park is proposed as a corporation yard.

Some of the best rugby teams in the United States will compete Saturday and Sunday on the Carmel Junior High School playfield.

The local competition is sponsored by Northern California Rugby Union and the Monterey Junior Chamber of Commerce. Stanford has won the last two contests.

The Monterey Peninsula Surfing Society is hoping for a good surf on Saturday when it will sponsor the first organized surfing meeting to be held on Carmel beach. Members will judge and police all activities and be responsible for cleaning up the beach for the event.

MONTEREY

baseball team raised their pre-season record to 2-0 by trouncing the Monterey High Toreadores 10-3 in a game played at Carmel.

Cold winds and occasional rains failed to bother the Padres, but in the end the weather and the outcome left Monterey "all wet."

Carmel bombed Monterey starting pitcher Doug Garner, who lasted only three and two-thirds innings, relinquishing nine hits and eight runs, six of which were earned. Toreadore reliever Tom Heydeman didn't have much success either, as he gave up four hits and two runs in two and one-third innings.

Winning pitcher Bob Egli and third baseman Mark Nichols blasted homeruns for the Padres. For Egli it was his second in as many games, and for Nichols, who collected three runs batted in, it was his third round-tripper in two games.

Carmel leftfielder Jeff Vadervort banged out four hits in four attempts and drove in three runs. It was a very timely game to come up with a performance like Jeff did, as he is still battling for that leftfield job.

Other impressive performers for the Padres, were second baseman Jim Giordano and centerfielder Joe Gimbel. Giordano rapped out three hits including a double, and scored two runs, while Gimbel got a base hit and scored two runs. Carmel shortstop David Hare also touched home plate twice.

The scoring started quickly in the game, as Monterey tallied a run in the first inning. But the Padres came back in the bottom of the first and gave Garner and Monterey some indication of what the day was to be like, as they scored three times. The Toreadores scored a single run in the second, and the score stood at 3-2 until the fourth inning. Carmel then jumped all over Garner and tallied five times, including Egli and Nichols' homers. The Padres added two more runs in the fifth as they took a commanding 10-2 lead.

Carmel's starting pitcher Egli, who picked up his first win of the year, hurled the first five innings, allowing seven hits, one earned run and struck out six batters. Pete O'Brien, a junior lefty toiled the last two innings for the Padres, allowing one run, and striking out three. The run O'Brien surrendered, was a homerun to Monterey's Fred Quintos in the sixth, which made the final score 10-3. For O'Brien it was his second save of the young season.

PARTY PLANS

Corned beef and Irish Whiskey

By PHYLLIS JERVEY

Saint Patrick's Day brings back memories of New York City's huge parade so colorful and precise. Then to Dinty Moore's for the most superb corned beef and cabbage. This was so satisfying that after thirds for the escorts and shamelessly seconds for the ladies there wasn't room for anything but Irish Whiskeys for the hardy and creme de menthe for the delicate.

So in Carmel why don't we watch the exciting police on horseback way back in N.Y.? Prepare a 5-lb. Corned Beef Brisket the day before, refrigerate then heat shortly before the viewing adding fresh quartered small green cabbages at last simmering. Following are explicit directions I gathered in that famous theatrical rendezvous, the unvarnished simply plain authentic corned beef.

Wipe the brisket with damp paper towels. Put in large kettle with a kitchen plate upside down in the bottom. Fill with cold water after adding the brisket. Season with a halved yellow onion, 1 chopped garlic bud, 2 whole cloves 3 peppercorns, 1 bay leaf, a few mustard seeds. Simmer until fork tender 3-4 hours, adding more water as needed but do not drown because now comes the crucial secret...add honey to taste, nothing cloying only pure clover leaf. What a subtle addition. If I hadn't been curious when at Dinty's I would never have known.

We also have a special spot in Carmel where corned beef is out of this world...our British pub the Red Lion. Returning to my favorite recipe, when reheating do so in the same kettle used for preliminary cooking, the same also that was iceboxed...saves unnecessary slave labor. Serve the sliced corned beef (not paper thin) on platter kept hot on electric table warmer. Surround with quickly cooked cabbage wedges in small amount of lightly salted water until still bright green...top with butter. Go alongs are small baked potatoes, skins washed, oiled, each end sliced for steam to escape. As soon as these are baked, slash tops into an X and add butter. Salt and pepper is up to each participant.

Or to be truly Irish conservative boil unpeeled new potatoes until done but never soft. Let each butter their own. But one can broil these if pared. Cook in one inch boiling water in saucepan. Cover for 10 minutes. Drain. Turn into shallow baking pan. Brush well with butter, tiny amount of exp...perhaps paprika. Broil 6 inches below heat until golden crust is on all sides which requires close attention as turning frequently is a must. Have a small bowl of snipped fresh dill and chives, each available as an extra note of distinction.

Here is another non-Gallic idea: APPLIED PARSNIPS: One lb. parsnips; 1/2 tsp. salt; 1 1/2 cups apple juice; 2 Tbsps. brown sugar. Remove skins with vegetable peeler. Trim off tops. Cut in halves lengthwise removing core. Cook in 1/2 cup water with salt. Cover and cook until not quite tender, drain. Put in casserole covering with apple juice and brown sugar. Slide into 350 F. oven. Why slide. I believe we shouldn't but that is what the Western Growers Association told me to do. Quite remarkable.

Now to the all important Irish Whiskey...before, during and after: Irish whiskey, pieces of lemon peel, gingerale. Place two ice cubes in each highball glass. Add a jigger of Irish or Shamrock into same.

More coastal plan

by local agencies, but a state coastal agency could continue planning efforts to keep the plan up to date, hear appeals from local decisions, and safeguard statewide interests.

The plan suggests several variations, such as a single state agency or a state agency with regional components, or regional components of short duration to review local plans for conformity with the coastal master plan.

Costs and Financing

Defining the costs of the coastal plan broadly as administrative and for acquisition and development, the preliminary plan points out precise cost estimates cannot be provided until the type of agency for implementation is selected. It did, however, point to several means of financing the coastal plan, which included:

Permit fees. If a system of permit processing fees similar to the one now in operation were adopted, the plan suggests, $500,000 to $1.5 million per year could be generated.

Grants under the Coastal Zone Management Act of 1972. Under this federal program, matching local and state funds would have to be secured and permit fees and direct state appropriations qualify for matching funds. Although it is impossible to predict at this time the appropriation for these grants, California's eligibility for the funds should remain unquestionable, the preliminary plan says.

State tax revenues. These revenues could come from the general fund of the state or from special taxes, which raises additional questions. Should only users of the coast and those who benefit directly from coastal resources pay for coastal protection, or should all Californians finance the protection of areas of importance to the entire state? Three taxes address those questions, the state transient occupancy tax, state or coastal property transfer tax currently used exclusively by certain counties under state legislation, and an oil import-export tax (It is estimated the oil excise tax could generate $6 million a year).

State bond issues. The option would primarily be used for acquisition and development, the plan suggests.

Tideland oil revenues. The preliminary plan says that, given the most liberal estimates of other demands on revenues from depletion of resources in coastal waters and submerged lands, and assuming the renegotiation of existing leases, at least $50 million annually could be available for coastal activities. If the legislature assigned highest priority to coastal conservation, the plan continued, it is "probable" over $100 million could be available.

Library has top circulation

Carmel's Harrison Memorial Library has the distinction of having the highest per capita circulation of books of any library on the North American continent.

According to head librarian, Vicki Jones, Harrison circulates an average thirty books per person yearly. A small town library in Canada that accepts library cards from anywhere in the world ranks second with an average of eighteen books per capita yearly.

"Nearly everybody in Carmel has a library card. In most cities or villages you feel you're really giving good service if thirty per cent of the people have cards," stated the librarian.

Harrison circulates a total of more than 800 books a day which is considered astronomical for a library of its size.

Ms. Jones attributes the library's remarkable popularity to the unique population in Carmel and its environs.

"People in the area are very cosmopolitan, their education level is generally much higher than in most other towns the same size, and of course there are a great number of retired people who have the time to read," she said.

In addition she believes that the large percentage of people involved in "creative projects," either writing or painting, who live in the area are frequent library patrons.

"They come in and want a silhouette of a peacock. You really never know what they'll ask for next," she laughed.

In her four and a half years with the library Ms. Jones recalls certain questions she's been asked by library patrons that reflect the enormously wide interests of people in this community.

"One person came in and asked how many chickens were born in Petaluma in 1949, and another wanted to know the next February the moon would be full over the Taj Mahal."

The popularity of the library is not a recent phenomenon; the library has continually expanded since 1907 when it originated as a small wooden building on the southeast corner of Lincoln and 6th Streets.

The Harrison Memorial Library is the direct successor to the Carmel Free Library Association which was founded on Oct. 5, 1905 by Mr. and Mrs. Frank Powers, Mrs. F.H. Gray, Miss A. Gray, Miss Annie Miller, Mrs. Miller, E.A. Arne, J.P. Staples, Mrs. Helen Jaquith, and Miss E. Parmele. By 1907 the library owned 500 volumes, all but eight of which were gifts from members of the library.

The library soon outgrew its location on the southeast corner of Lincoln and Sixth Streets and moved in 1920 to the northwest corner of the intersection.

In 1926 Mrs. Ralph

Chandler Harrison gave land and funds for the establishment of the present library as a memorial to her husband. The library was enlarged in 1949 but is overflowing again. Besides the facilities at Lincoln and Sixth, the library uses about 1,000 square feet at Sunset Center for cataloguing and storage purposes.

Today, the books on the shelves at Harrison Memorial Library number about 76,000. Librarians claim the library is only designed to hold 49,000.

During the past year 3,144 books were added to the collection and 3,728 books were withdrawn. Of those withdrawn most are science books which have become outdated. The books to be discarded are sold annually at the library's book sale.

In addition to books the library has 446 records, 19 tape recordings, 102 films, 151 microfilms and 44 pictures. The library receives fifteen newspapers and 250 magazines.

Books are usually selected by Ms. Jones who spends hours pouring over book reviews, which she considers "the best part of my job," in addition there is a book committee composed of local residents who meet once a month to suggest acquisitions.

"For a community like this where interests are so varied you can buy all sorts of fun and interesting things and know they'll be read," said Ms. Jones.

The library staff consists of four professional librarians: Ms. Jones, Alice Terrell, children's librarian, Anna Binicos, reference librarian, and Maxine Shore, head of acquisitions. In addition there are four other full time aids, and six part time employees.

The budget this year (July 1, 1974 through June 30, 1975) is $149,000, of which $105,000 comes from the county. County residents currently account for half of the patronage of the library.

An important service offered by the library is the children's program under Alice Terrell's leadership. Besides a summer reading program and "story times" held several times a week, there is a special author-illustrator festival planned for spring. This will be the ninth such festival. "The idea is to give children and authors the opportunity to get together. We're hoping the authors will each share something personal with the children, either about their careers or books," said Mrs. Terrell.

But it is still the reference department that gets the most questions. In the Librarian's Annual Report it was stated that the reference librarian researched the following: a list of dude ranches in the U.S.; recipes for cooking rattlesnake; information on Costa Rica as a retirement area; a copy of the Humanist Manifesto; songs on the Hit Parade in the summer of 1941; and a copy of the British Greenbelt Law.

The Peugeot 504 diesel is one luxury car that doesn't cost a fortune to own. In the 1975 EPA

Kite contest set for Saturday

Local kite competitors may breathe a sigh of relief this spring at the news Rhonda Accosta of Fremont, who has won the Ernest Calley trophy three times in the past four years, may not return to the 45th annual Carmel Kite Festival Saturday.

The annual event draws contestants from all over the Peninsula and as far away as Yuba City.

Founded in 1930 by the Rev. Willis White, the festival was directed for many years by Ernest Calley, a shop teacher at the old Sunset School until his retirement.

Since the mid-1950's, the recreation department of the Carmel Unified School District has directed the contest and the Carmel Lions Club has donated trophies and ribbons.

The Calley trophy is awarded to the grand champion kite and was won last year again by Miss Accosta. Luanna Wythe of Monterey won the Willis White Trophy for the best designed kite.

In addition to the perpetual trophies, awards will be made in the five categories for first, second and third in high-flying, best workmanship and beauty. Age categories are eight years and younger, nine through 12 years, 13 through 15 years, adult, and 12 years under without adult assistance.

All kites must be made by the contestants and commercial, ready-made kites are unacceptable. Charles Dawson, director of recreation, says. All kites must become airborne and fly in order to be eligible for prize consideration, as well. Kites capable of carrying passengers aloft will not be allowed, he adds.

Expected as guests at the festival will be Mrs. Frances Herrick, the daughter of Mr. White, and Mrs. Ernest Calley, wife of Mr. Calley.

The contest will be held from 1:30-4:30 p.m. Saturday at the Middle School. Registration is free.

Need A 4 Bedroom House?

The Spanish dons who originally settled this sun blessed land must have lived rather like this - in a home with lots of brick and adobe surrounding beautifully landscaped patios. Bring the outdoors in - or take the indoors out; either is enjoyable and easy to do from the open, flow through rooms.

Beamed ceilings throughout the house, ceramic tiles and spacious window walls add lightness and charm to the rooms. There are 4 bedrooms, 3 baths, living room, dining room, and a family fun room for a fun-loving family! This modern day hacienda is on more than an acre of property backed by the Carmel River with excellent horse facilities, including a stable and corral. It is truly a pleasure to show this home to prospective buyers! Come for your own viewing and you will understand our enthusiasm.

Take an older redwood cottage originally built by a bay area artist; let time mature the site and add that precious feeling of tranquility, then add an imaginative and innovative new owner who rebuilds and enlarged the original house into the ideal Carmel home we now offer. Two bedrooms, two baths, spacious redwood decks, a sheltered brick patio, ample storage, and so on all add up to create this gem. Offered at $85,000.
